KEY LEARNING

As patients age, their skin suffers not only from the effects of time, but also from environmental factors such as the sun, pollution, harsh weather and certain vices. Aging is inevitable, however deterioration is evitable.

Based on recent advances in skin aging research, the medical and scientific experts will review the safety and efficacy of cosmeceuticals, nutraceuticals and home-use devices for skin rejuvenation, covering from preventative procedures to post-treatment care, with all the various intervention methods in-between.

In today's ever-expanding field of cosmeceuticals where the term "anti-aging" is slowly being replaced by a more wholesome ideology of "healthy living, healthy aging", leaders of the field seek to answer the questions that can make a difference: which of the products in the current market are truly safe and effective? What is their place in cosmetic dermatology and plastic surgery?
